

Dear Fellow Doctors,

I am writing to you today because as an educated public service advocate you know too well that people suffer from pain needlessly due to lack of knowledge and preventative care. If only the public had more resources to stay abreast of the latest health issues and accommodating tips to avoid ever even becoming ill, our jobs would be a lot easier and people would feel healthier and happier. I feel that it is essential to inform my patients of the causes and treatment options concerning their health condition which is why our doctors at Family Foot & Ankle Specialists took the time to write two informative and highly effective books entitled Got Feet? and You Do Not Have to Suffer From Foot & Ankle Pain. We focus on the many ailments that effect people's feet, heel pain, athletic sprains and most devastating, diabetes. We even went as far as to make easy to understand DVD's for those unwilling or unable to read. According to the Times Online, diabetes is now responsible for 70% of all lower limb amputations, and with the growing number of diabetics in the U.S. it is vital that people stay educated on the horrific impact it can have on your life. Cathie Crowe, PhD director of the Diabetes Epidemiology program at the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases states, "We're facing a diabetes epidemic that shows no signs of abating, judging from the number of individuals with prediabetes." We are campaigning against foot and ankle problems by keeping the public educated which is why we are extending our fee books and DVD's to you and your patients.
